

The Farm in Old Kentucky

*On the farm in old Kentucky,
Lived a cat, who had the blues.
Old Tom was deaf, he couldn't hear,
His fam'ly blew a fuse.
'He does not come, when we call for him.
He's the worst cat in the State!
So by-and-by we'll throw him out,
If one more time he's late!'*

This old-time bluegrass music
It ain't just for the boys!
We're telling you a story
Of a cat, who can't hear noise.

*While the old cat roamed the farmyard
And the mouse squeaked in the hay,
The pigs were fat, the cows were plump
And the sun it shone all day.
And the sheep were white as fluffy clouds,
The dog barked at the gate,
'Come in, old cat, your tea is done!'
The dog called, 'Go home mate!'*

This old-time bluegrass music
It ain't just for the boys!
We're telling you a story
Of a cat who can't hear noise.

*But the old cat did not hear him
And ran into the shed.
The mouse begged, 'Please don't eat me Sir!'
And jumped upon his head.
And the dog came in all worried,*

'Go home now for your tea!
'He cannot hear a word you say,
Said the mouse, 'so follow me!'

This old-time bluegrass music
It ain't just for the boys!
We're telling you a story
Of a cat who can't hear noise.

So the mouse caught old Tom's ears
And steered him to his plate.
The dog barked, 'Hey I get it now,
We can help him not be late!
And old Tom meowed with happiness,
The mouse leapt joyfully,
The dog said, 'Hey, let's all be friends -
One happy family!'

This old-time bluegrass music
It ain't just for the boys!
We're telling you a story
Of a cat who can't hear noise.

So the moral of this story
Is be kind to your friends,
Don't be a fool and act all cruel,
As often it offends,
And love your pets, when they are old,
(They always will love you),
Be like the mouse, be like the dog
And you'll be happy too.

'Whoop-de-dee!' cried the farmer.
'Hooray!' baaed the sheep.
The cows, they mooed, 'Yay!'

And the pigs, well they oinked, 'Hey!'

'Whoop-de-dee!' cried the farmer

'Hooray!' baaed the sheep.

The cows, they mooed, 'Yay!'

The pigs they oinked, 'Hey!'

And the old cat fell asleep!

Yee hah!
